
got problem with horizontal layout

Posted by mornsen - 2008/01/22 03:49

hey dear supporter i got following problem

i need a list of recent online visitors like its down on this side, direct under the topmenu.

i didnt really know witch one , of all this moostuff it could be so i tried moolets_recent_visitors and mooletS_online_1.1.1 the problem is now i cant switch them to horizontal layout - although i have set in the backend :

Slide Vertical or Horizontal -> horiz.
Aspect Ratio -> horiz.

the recent_visitor will be shown as something like an matirx

any ideas here is the link :

Hey do us a favor, if you read the rules about the forum here you need to upload or set an avatar for support.

Take care of that and we will go take a peek

thanks

iam sorry, i wasnt before in a forum where that was important hope you like the pic :)

So, what file do i need to change , to get it horizontal ?! only the settings inbackend , or the css. of the moolet ? or the template css ?

thx for reading m.

Right, its just that we build avatar tools and no on wants to help show them off but they want us to help them get them working on their site, so yes, I love that avatar!

I was able to get that moolet working in Horizontal mode but the pull down in the admin does not matter. I should remove it.

What you need to do is change this one CSS

#moolet_recent_visitors_frame {
width: 150px;
padding: 0px 0px 0px 0px;
}
```

to

```
#moolet_recent_visitors_frame {
width: 700px;
height: 70px;
padding: 0px 0px 0px 0px;

oki - and if i want to use moolet_visitors in the same way you did (under the menu)

what do i have to change there if i change the frame width there also - the avatars are all on the same place :(

I dont have moolet recent visitors set up under the menu, that is actually moolet who's online. It has more controls for the horizontal then the recent visitors.

Might try that one. Also each of these probably will require some CSS work specific to a user template and some fiddling may be required.
