
mySQL error messages

yep,
I would delete the moolet from your modules list, looks like you are on a shared hosts that has the mySQL premission set in a way these will not run on your server.

sorry

Dangit, that's too bad. Maybe one day I'll be able to afford dedicated hosting.

Actually, I which I had more time to be helpfull. There are plenty of shared hosting companies that have settings that these things will work on. If I could only get users to contribute those names.

There is another option if you can write a little code, and that would simply be to add your username and password in the database requests in the moolet. Several have done that with great success.

maybe when i have time I can change the way I get my data to be more at ease with the rest of the world

I used to be with Godaddy and there were just way too many restrictions, I had to contact them for pretty much everything I wanted to do, so I switched over to Dot5 hosting, cause it was pretty cheap and I like the freedom. I think I will try doing the code thing later tonight. Thanks for all your help, if every site had admin like you guys the world would...nevermind.

"every site had admin like you guys the world would...nevermind."

not sure what you are saying? that our service sucks?

We here is the thing, moolets are free, so not only do we not get paid to develop them we do not get paid to distribute them. I thing the thing people forget most is we do not get paid to support them. We here have to make a living like everyone else.

It amazes us how you can share your code with others wat no charge yet that still is not enough for most folks. We had to take the karma pionts off this forum for that very reason.

Some cat got really mad that we would not flip for our own plane ticked to the ukrain or somewhere to get these going on his site.

I am a web developer by trade. That is what I do, I don't have one cient that asks for a quote before I begin work.

Maby I should remove the forums and just post a few FAQs and leave it at that..

I didn't mean to come across that way. It was meant to be a compliment, because not every site gives you such expedient replies. The reason I said nevermind was because I was going to made a comment about another prominent site that many of the topics are dead with no replies, but I decided it would be better not to do that.

I appreciate the work you do here, these are the coolest modules around, so I just want to say thanks. I'm just starting to learn php and my hope is that one day I can get good enough to create something to offer up to the community, but as I see it that day is far, far off. Keep up the good work...do you guys have a means to make donations? Even though I haven't been able to get any of the stuff working due to the server issues, I would still like to make one...

oh, I am so sorry!

Thanks for kind words, we have had a rash of harassment emails from developers posing as students looking for free or cheap help, seems to be the lates internet racket.

So I guess I am personally over sensitive and need to chill out.

About the help is our core business is overloaded and we can not keep up. So we created a new section here where folks that need help that can pay a little or send some beer can get it.

We have a huge project going out the door in December, so after that we can give more time to this. I just feel a bit bad in the interim for folks that want moolets, or need moolets, but can't get them to work, as they do take a mother load of fiddling going from server to server.

Thanks again for stopping by and sorry I bounced on you..

No biggie, I have pretty thick skin, plus I knew it was just a miscommunication. Looking back on the post I made, it was pretty vague...good luck on your projects, I'll be around...
