
Two questions about this website

Posted by tandytech - 2007/10/28 11:27

First, thank you for moolets. Have two quick questions about this website.

First: "Avatar Required To Participate". I like this feature. I was wondering how or what you are using to prevent users from posting without first requiring them to select an avatar?

Second: Under My Account you have "Profile URL" which allows a user to re-direct his profile to "www.moolets.com/". I don't see this as a feature of CB, how do you do this?

Thanks,
Mark

Re:Two questions about this website

Posted by brian_williford - 2007/10/28 21:19

Mark,

First, lets all thank the cats the created Mootools so that allows me in turn to say your welcome on creating Moolets.

First #2)

The code I use to try to force avatar uploads on fire board is all custom. So there is no plugin or any easy way to do it. I did not even finish that. As there seems to be about 10 places where the create thread or reply icons show up I found about 4, hacked in the code and ran out of time, so many users still seem to post without it.

I can give you the database query I created that checks for the avatar and decides wether to show the image or the warning link if it is of value. I will not have the time to go see where I pasted that in. You would need to do that yourself.

Second)

This one more helpful. The user profile link comes from a guy named Mike, forgot the last name but you can download that here:

<http://mike.simbunch.com/>

It is a community builder plugin.

brian

Re:Two questions about this website

Posted by tandytech - 2007/10/28 21:39

Brian, thanks for the information and the quick response. I'm going to pass on the query for now, although I can probably figure it out given enough time, I just don't have the time. :(So far now I'll stick with what's quicker, I'll check out the link you provided. Thanks again.

Mark
