
More Browser Support

Posted by pgkerr - 2007/11/10 11:18

I would like to see these modules developed to the stage that at least the two main web browsers out (IE and Firefox) are able to handle them without problems. It seems senseless to me to be building modules based on community yet only making them for one browser. Not everybody uses or even likes firefox including me :P

=====

Re:More Browser Support

Posted by ohmybrain - 2007/11/10 17:59

1) If you were to read the FAQ's would already know this is a evil empire free work zone. As full time developers that have built sites for National Geographic, Time Life, Disney, etc. We have no tolerance for products that put our clients ask risk.

2) Moolets are for Mootools based social networking site developers, not for the general joomla populous.

3) Moolets are based on Mootools. Mootools being a DOM Framework, or Document Object Model Framework it would be virtually impossible to develop a site without Firebug for DOM traces, and firebug is of course a Firefox plugin.

We appreciate all comments but will stand firm against any IE or non linux based system support.

=====

Re:More Browser Support

Posted by ohmybrain - 2007/11/10 18:24

I have found similar sentiment in other mootools communities with regards to IE. One I know if has actually blocked access to IE visitors.

You might poke around the jquery and Prototype script library communities and see if they are more supportive of your needs.

=====